Palette knife painting can breathe new life into your painterly

- Explore essential knife techniques, including color mixing
- Paint alla prima (wet into wet) for a fresh painterly approach
- Paint an outdoor scene and a still life with nothing but a knife... you can do it!

You can use oil or acrylic paint; the choice is yours. Bring the color palette you are comfortable using. This class will touch on value, composition, color and drawing but the primary focus is using the palette knife to create thick painterly paintings. See supply list.

Jay Holobach is a contemporary impressionist known for his gestural palette knife technique to transform the ordinary into the beautiful. His bold, colorful impasto-styled landscape paintings are diverse in both color choice and subjects, from the lone hay bale to the fleeting sunrise. His works reside in private collections throughout the Midwest and have been shown in group exhibitions regionally. Living in Edmond, OK., he is a teacher at the Edmond Fine Arts Institute and a volunteer "Paint Buddy" for a philanthropic organization that pairs artists with children who have been diagnosed with cancer.
